Witty Tale of Suspense "Gaffney puts to use her background in the diverse worlds of show dogs and fashion, as she cleverly weaves together this exciting and witty tale of suspense." Jerry Labriola author of The Strange Death of Napoleon Bonapart A Novel Proceeds at Rattling Speed "Fashion Goes to the Dogs is a novel that proceeds at a rattling speed and has something for everyone – dogs/knitters/fashionistas/love/crime/NY city/international plotting/royalty/shamrock pride – am hoping that green eyed Harry appears in the next book and Dillon gets a book of his own!" Frances Gilbert, author. Could Not Put Book Down - 5 stars "Peggy's description of the dog show scene is perfect and twisting a plot into the NY show was artful. Love introduced, politely and with good manners, leaving the reader hopeful the relationship continues in the next book.

Where does Dillon go now that he is a champion dog? Ah, wait, wait...there will be more books." Sandra M. McDonald Can't wait for the next in the series! 5 stars "This book is a pure delight! ... Peggy writes a good action story, gives great insight into the dog show world, and develops a lovely love story, all around a very strong woman with classic self doubts. What a nice, nice read!" Susan H. An enjoyable story. 5 stars "I like dog books, detective stories, mysteries, and just about anything written well. This one had all of that. Although I haven't met the author personally I know her by reputation in the dog world, so I wanted to see what she had done. Within a few chapters it drew me in.

I wanted to know what was going to happen, and found I was beginning to like the characters, which is a big deal to me. Even the names she used were easy to read. Her character development is better than you expect from a first time novelist, and the plot is well thought out with surprises in the right places. I was trying to ration the book and read just a few chapters at a time, but when I started reading today I decided to ignore the world until I finished. It's that good. I haven't enjoyed a book as much as this in ages." Ron Manor. FASHION GOES TO THE DOGS Kate Killoy is an expert at two things; knitting design and dogs.
