Find out for just $0.99 or FREE on Kindle Unlimited Determined to help civilize her small, dusty mining town, Aunt Agnes makes a plan. She will find suitable wives for the men in town—whether they want them or not! When Isabella Scott first steps out into the heat and dust of Clifton, Arizona, she wonders how anyone could live in such a desolate place. Sent to visit her aunt, who moved from the East to this Western frontier, she is simply counting the days until she can leave. So when she learns her parents have sent her West to meet a husband, she is shocked and alarmed.

A husband here, in this rowdy town full of men? But when Isabella meets Benjamin Densmore, owner of the general store, her heart begins to soften.

His kind eyes, like a brewing storm, and generous nature seem to make the dusty town a bit brighter. So when Isabella sees the chance to help him out of a jam with the town bullies, the Lewinsky brothers, she impulsively takes it—and finds herself in more trouble than she expected. Can Isabella find her way to love in this rugged frontier town? She will, if Aunt Agnes has anything to do with it!
